Organization

Fandom | Cultures | Research is a biannual, bilingual open access journal (English/German) published by the open access repository media/rep/. We aim at creating an innovative platform to further develop the understanding of cultural practices from the perspective of fan studies and reception research as well as to critically discuss their theoretical frameworks and foundations. The journal is made up of original research articles, their scientific quality is assured by means of a double-blind peer review process. Other formats (e.g., data papers, reviews) undergo editorial review.

Editorial board: Vera Cuntz-Leng (Philipps-Universität Marburg), Sophie G. Einwächter (Philipps-Universität Marburg), Anne Ganzert (Universität Konstanz), Vanessa Ossa (Technische Hochschule Köln), in cooperation with Dominika Ciesielska (Jagiellonian University, Kraków), Kaya Mogge (Philipps-Universität Marburg), Elsa-Margareta Venzmer (Friedrich-Alexander-Universität Erlangen-Nürnberg)

Procedure

Scholarly articles should have a length of 5,000-8,000 words. Articles submitted in the sections "Best Practices", "Lessons Learned" as well as conference reports and book reviews, which may be correspondingly shorter in length, are proofread by the editorial team and returned to the authors for further processing after completion of the editorial review. Scholarly papers are anonymised and reviewed by at least two advisory board members or external reviewers (double-blind peer review). The reviews briefly cover content, methodology, quality, innovativeness, and relevance of the manuscripts. They are usually 1-2 pages in length.

A manuscript gets accepted if both reviewers are in favour of publication. The endorsement can be without restriction (accept), or with minor or major revisions. If the reviewers approve the publication with minor revisions, the editorial team decides whether the desired conditions have been met; if the reviewers approve the publication with major revisions, a new review is required.

Short biography

We require a short biography, which will appear below your published article and should be structured as follows (100 words max.):

First name - last name, academic degree, institutional affiliation/position, studies or qualifications, stages of your career path, current publications if applicable, main research areas: A, B and C. Contact address and ORCID, if available.

Style

For any spelling questions please refer to the Merriam-Webster Dictionary. The journal is aimed at a broad academic public from various disciplines. For this reason, we ask for a clear and easily understandable choice of language.

Text format and submission

Please only submit documents in .docx (not .doc), .rtf or .odt file format. Submissions must be sent as email attachments to fcr-journal@uni-marburg.de – however, an Open Journal System (OJS) is in planning for the future. This email address is for submissions only and proposals will be blinded before they are passed on to the editors (for general inquiries please contact the editorial board via editors-fcr-journal@uni-marburg.de). Please refrain from using your own text formatting (e.g., page numbers, hyphenation, bold print, colour markings) and please use single-line spacing in your text.

Abstract

Please add an abstract (300 words max.) at the beginning of the text that should be available in both German and English.

Keywords

Please provide us with 3-4 keywords for the content of your article in order to make it easier to find it in the media/rep/repository.

References in text and bibliography

The journal uses in-text citations according to the scheme (author, year, page number – if applicable). Footnotes should exclusively be used for notes and as sparingly as possible. The complete bibliographic note must be given in the literature list. Repeated names should be abbreviated to 'idem'. When indicating publishers, please use short term forms, e.g., 'transcript' not 'Transcript Verlag' and 'UP' instead of 'University Press'.

Bibliography guide:

1. Monographs

Last name, first name: title: subtitle. place: publisher, year.

- a) For edited volumes add (ed./eds.) after name
- b) Multiple authors should be separated using a slash

2. Essays in anthologies

Last name, first name: "title of the essay." In: last name, first name (ed.): title of the anthology: subtitle. place: publisher, year, pages.

3. Journal articles

Last name, first name: "title of the article." In: journal name volume (issue number), year, pages.

4. Online sources

Last name, first name: "title" (year of initial publication). URL (date of last retrieval).

5. Newspapers

Quotation marks

Quotation marks should be used for direct quotes, essays, and articles from books and journals as well as chapter headings, exhibitions, projects, graduate programmes, etc. Furthermore, you can use single inverted commas for emphasis or narrative distance. Please don't use italics or bold text for these purposes as these forms of emphasis should generally be used sparingly.

Changes of quotations

If you change quotations (e.g., omissions, rearrangements, etc.), please always mark them with square brackets. If you add your own translations, mark them with your initials in square brackets.

Page references

In-text references to page numbers are to be marked with round brackets without a blank space between 'p.' and the page number. Always indicate 'f.' and 'ff.' (following pages) with a full stop. When paraphrasing, please add 'cf.'. If you name several page numbers, please use commas followed by a space to join them and end with a final 'and' between the last two numbers.

Examples:

- "International communication developed as a field of study when a clear line of demarcation existed between the national and the international" (Chalaby 2023, p.14).
- ... as shown by different sources (cf. Busse/Hellekson 2006, p.5f.; Jenkins 2006, p.25f., p.75, and p.100ff.).

Filmographic/mediagraphic information

- a) Titles of books, journals, films, (TV) series, computer/video games as well as radio/audio plays ought to be written in italics and when mentioned for the first time, the year of first publication or the broadcasting period is to be added. When referring to individual episodes of a TV series, please indicate the season and episode in brackets (as with book chapters, article titles, and the names of conferences and meetings, episode titles should be placed in quotation marks, not be written in italics). Please only use original titles unless this would significantly impair comprehension.
- b) If a title is given in brackets, please put the year of publication in square brackets. Primary works do not require information on publishers, distributors, directors, place of publication, etc.

Examples:

- The Matrix (1999), Dexter (2006-2013) or Wednesday (2022-)
- Mary Shelley's Frankenstein, or the Modern Prometheus (1818)
- ... Jon Snow comes back (cf. S5E10).
- ... as shown by different movies (e.g., L'Année dernière à Marienbad [1961])...
- ... that expand the scope of the approach (e.g., Bergermann 2015; Moser 2010).

Foreign-language terms

Established foreign-language terms should generally be written in italics. They should also be written according to the language of their origin.

Examples: Schauerliteratur, dōjinshi

Abbreviations

Abbreviations can only be used when extra information is given in brackets.

Examples: for example (e.g.)

Proper names

Please ensure correct spelling of proper names (e.g., company names, institutions). Please do not use italics or quotation marks – only if referencing the title of a book, play, film, TV series, or game.

Examples: YouTube, P!nk, Se7en (1995)

Year numbers

Please insert year numbers in continuous text without a hyphen.

Examples: 1950s

Illustrations

The use of illustrations is possible, but please consult the editorial team beforehand and let them know if you have secured the necessary rights. Images must be submitted as separate files and should not be integrated into the text flow. Provide them with a meaningful caption and use appropriate markers in the text (fig.1).
